

lebe

sobe

kollektiv

PIRATE PEDAGOGIES

ebe
sobe kollektiv

PIRATE PEDAGOGIES is a site-specific project exploring the tactile and acoustic features of urban space through participatory workshops with children. Using a card game designed by the collective, the project creates a photographic card deck of materials found in playgrounds, each of which is paired with questions reflecting on synesthesia and narrative formation. Using the cards as a guide, the children engage with the space and its materials, experiencing it as a field of bodily experimentation and corporeal sense-making. Through play the materials address the children directly,: “be curious, touch me, climb me”.

The project sees the playground as a research site and pedagogical tool, inviting an exploration through texture, sound, and

question that highlight empathy, care and narrative building.

The urgency of this project lies in the transformation of public spaces into
increasingly regulated,
standardized, and
risk-managed
environments. This discipline turn of
recreational spaces limits
material engagement,
preventing creativity from sparkling through informal and unpredictable play. The workshop approaches the playground as an architectural typology, reimagining it as a site of belonging creativity and corporeal encounter. This way, spontaneous play is emphasised and encouraged. For children aged 6–12, the playground is often the realm where they can negotiate social and political norms, proximity, conflict, and care beyond institutions. The

work with this age group
grounds this learning
process in embodied
experience and relational
knowledge, empowering
children to shape space
collectively.

METHOD

ebe
sobe kollektiv

The project treats playgrounds as research site and pedagogical tool, exploring it through textures, field recordings, and questions that highlight empathy, care and narrative building.

The urgency of this project lies in the transformation of public spaces into increasingly regulated, standardized, and risk-managed environments, where material engagement and informal play are limited. To emphasise the importance of play, the workshop focuses on the playground as an architectural typology, reimagining it as a site of belonging, creativity and material encounter. For children aged 6–12, playgrounds are often where they negotiate social and political norms, proximity, conflict, and care beyond institutions. Working with this age group grounds the experience in embodied and relational knowledge, highlighting children's capacity to shape space collectively.

Is this texture
closer to the
future or the
past?

Cette texture se
rapproche-t-elle
plutôt du futur ou
du passé ?

If this texture
were a mood,
which one
would it be?

Si cette texture
était une
humeur, laquelle
serait-ce ?

Bu doku sence nasıl
hissediyor? Mutlu
mu, üzgün mü,
meraklı mı, öfkeli
mi?

Wie fühlt sich diese
Textur deiner Meinung
nach emotional an?
Fröhlich, traurig,
neugierig, wütend?

What does this
texture smell
like?

À quoi cette
texture
pourrait-elle
sentir?

ebe
so be kollektiv